

SIR ROBERT A HIT ON SHIP AS ROMEO

Wore Slippers of Red, a Bath
Robe and Blue Half Hose.

Sir Robert Dashwood, Bart, was the cabin cut-up coming over on the White Star liner B. L. to-day from Liverpool. Most of the time he was the life of the ship, but Tuesday night he came very near being its death. That was when he insisted on pulling off the balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet" at the concert in the salon.

Sir Robert belongs to a very old English family—and he looks it. Nevertheless he volunteered to play Romeo. It was a harder job to get a Juliet. Finally one daring young woman passenger volunteered and they proceeded to the first rehearsal in the presence of the first-class passengers and all of the crew who could be spared. As the captain said, they were only poor sailormen barred from many of the joys of life and there was no justice in shutting them out from a pleasure the like of which might never be seen again.

He said that after he saw how Sir Robert dressed the part, Romeo wore a Scotch cap, a long bathrobe with a cord about the waist, blue half hose and red felt bathroom slippers. The cheering was tumultuous when the blue half hose and the bedroom slippers came on.

The rehearsal wasn't altogether an unqualified success, although Romeo did his part—everybody admitted that. The Pumper Palmer was instructed the difficult task of promptly to the moon, in the lines where Juliet makes reference to the moonlight moon not being on the level. Palmer was expected to rise from behind a chair holding a lighted electric bulb aloft. As a moonlight Palmer was a sad affair. He kept shining out from behind the chair at the wrong cue and he wobbled so that Juliet couldn't get a focus on the electric light at all. It was generally conceded to be a bum moon.

Also when the time came for Romeo to kiss Juliet the volunteer Juliet balked, and kept on balking until Romeo got a substitute. The successor also balked, and so did her successor.

until four of them had been tried and none of them kissed.
Pat Cuddy, the Omaha packer, with his wife and Edward Cuddy, Jr., who got kidnapped once by Pat Cuddy, were also passengers on the B. L. Young Ed Cuddy is a pretty sizeable chap now. W. P. Cuddy, a Pittsburgh tourist, said that he and Cuddy sat in a poker game with three Englishmen and when they took the limit off the Omaha had made some bets that chilled the British feet badly.
Thomas H. Ball, of Philadelphia, who came off with $150 worth of cameo in his pocket, had the sorrow of seeing them confiscated by Customs Officer Tim Donohue.

SOUGHT ACCIDENT WITNESS WITH A GUN.

Man Injured by Trolley Tried to Shoot Conductor Who Refused to Testify for Him.

Charged with felonious assault and with carrying concealed weapons, Joseph L. Kelsch, of No. 123 Broadway, Williamsburg, was held in $1,000 bail to-day in the Ewen Street Court. The complainant was Israel Antopolaky, a conductor on the Rushing avenue extension. Two weeks ago Kelsch was hurt on a car. Last night he went out looking for witnesses.

On the first car he boarded was Antopolaky, who was on the car when Kelsch was hurt. Kelsch asked him if he was going to testify for or against him. The conductor said he would testify for the company.

Kelsch at once pulled a pistol from his pocket and holding it at the other's head threatened to shoot him. There was a scuffle, and the two went to the floor. The car cleared in a panic and two men fled. Kelsch was arrested. They held Kelsch for a moment. Then he broke away, ran to the rear and jumped off. He was chased for five blocks and finally caught and arrested.

Husband Late, Wife Takes Poison.
WINSTED, Conn., May 4.—Because her husband did not return from a trout-fishing expedition when he promised to, Mrs. Harry Cotton, thirty years old, of Otis, took a dose of carbolic acid and doctors have little hope of her recovery. Intimate friends of Mrs. Cotton say that she had no other reason to attempt her life.

Turns Stone Into Water.
Ozak, a chemical that turns stone into water, has just been discovered by Prince Lermontoff. The Prince puts his discovery to a strange use. In the "Battle," Robert Barr's new novel, begins in the Sunday World next Sunday.

Sale 500 men's blue serge suits at $11.

THE desirability of serge suits depends entirely upon the quality of the fabric—a poor serge can be ironed into shape to look well while new, but it's only good serge that looks stylish and hangs right as long as you wear it, and the serge in these $11 suits is identical in quality with that used by custom tailors in their $80 suits.

Our usual price is $15, but we secured this lot of 500 at a big reduction from the regular price. All hand made from strictly all-wool blue serge in the new single and double breasted effects. The coats have hand-made collars and the fashionable broad concave shoulders, cut according to the latest styles, in sizes to fit men of all proportions.

$15.50 for suits that ought to sell at $20.

Have the same long-cut coats, form fitting, snug around collar, with the fashionable broad shoulders and deep side and centre vents. For style, wear and fit these suits equal those made to measure for $30 or $35.

Men's high-grade suits at $19.75.

We show these suits in the new gray worsteds, fancy mixtures and blue serges, exclusive weaves not shown in other ready-to-wear clothing. The single-breasted coats have deep side vents, lapels cut long and either peaked or round. The waistcoats and trousers are in the newest designs.....
